PLAYING ROBBER. Special to the Gazette.

DALLAS, TEX., Jan. 23 .- Tuesday evening, Tom Ord, Porter Cochran, Jimmie Record and several more tenyear-olds were playing "robber" on McKinney avenue. They were all mounted. Tommy Ord was the 'robber," and the vigilantes under the leadership of Capt. Porter Cochran were endeavoring to capture him. Capt. Cochran imbued with that spirit of intrepldity which characterized his father, Dr. Arch Cochran, during the recent campaign, dashed | NEW YORK. ahead of his followers in pursuit of the fleeing "robber," Ord. Capt. Cochran's horse displayed a wonderful amount of speed, and not only overtook the robber's steed, but ran into him headforemost and broke his neck, killing himself almost instantly. The game of "robber" is now extinct in that neighbor-

ROMANTIC LIFE OF BRADLEY. Bradley, the murdered base ball catcher, it appears, lived a brief but romantic life. The news of his tragic death reached Louisville, where he was well known, and a paper in that city publishes the following interesting sketch of his life: "Charles M. Bradley, or 'Brad,' as he was familliarly called, was very well known in Louisville, and was one of the most popular base ball men in the country, Born in June, 1864, in the oil regions of Pennsylvania, of wealthy parents, he was surrounded with every luxury. He acquired a collegiate education and all the ornamental accomplishments ot modern times. He was possessed of a charming tenor voice, was a brilliant pianist and an expert linguist. He was passionately fond of the national game, and his great ability as a catcher won for him the sobriquet of "The Stonewall Backstop." He first sprang into fame as a catcher with the Corning, N. Y., team of 1885, and was with the Topeka team of the Western league in the early part of 1886. He injured his knee cap while sliding to bases at Denver, and never fully recovered from the consequent stiffness. Being released from Topeka at the same time with Weaver, now of Louisville, he signed with the Abilenes, champion Kansas team, in June, 1886, and finished the season with them. He Kansas as a fireman, and in 1887 played with the Emporia team in the Kansas state league. In 1888 he played with the famous "State Fair" team of Dallas, Tex., champions of the Texas league.

Bradley is thus spoken of by an old ball player of Louisville, who knows him very intimately: "Just befere a hard-fought battle against a Topeka team at Abilene we were in a ferment on account of our team not having a first-class catcher. When Weaver and Bradley arrived we placed Weaver on second base and Bradley behind the bat. "Turk" Burke, afterward reserved by Detroit in 1886, went in to pitch, and our great team sent Topeka to bed to the tune of 11 to 0. It was Brad's first appearance, and his magnificent catching of Burke's heavy drop-curves made him at once a favorite with everybody. He caught nearly every contest played, always putting up a uniformly steady game, and to his excellent work was greatly due our successful season. "Bradley was unusually reticent as to his past history, and I doubt if there are many besides myself who know much of his past. An early disagreement with his father, the result of his penchant for base ball, led to an estrangement, and, troubles never coming singly, he was rejected by a young lady of Oil City, Pa., to whom he was devoted. He drifted carelessly from place to place, his ambition gone, and his only care being to drown his 'aching void.' I will remember his favorite ballad: 'When other lips and other hearts their tales of Then you'll remember me,' had come, and how sadly he would turn away to learned that Peeples and Joyce, the only hide his tears."

THE GRAHAM TRAGEDY. Capt. W. H. Morton, deputy United States marshal, arrived in Dallas tonight with the two Marlows and Lewis Cliff. He arrested them at Denson's farm in Young county, about twelve nine cases of cruelty to animals. miles from Graham. Instead of taking them to Weatherford, he proceeded to Gordon and took the train from that place. All three of the prisoners are badly wounded, one of them, George Marlow, seriously.
